

ABSTRACT

A keypad includes a substrate and one or more layers of decorative material on the substrate. Transparent and/or conventional conductive materials are disposed on the decorative material. Electrical circuit components are soldered to the conductive layers.